California is home to the largest court system in the United States, with more than 2,000 judicial officers and 18,000 court employees serving more than 34 million people each year. The courts range from criminal and civil courts to juvenile and family courts, all with one thing in common: custodial personnel.

This telecourse focuses on specific situations-- many based on actual cases-- where custodial personnel training and preparation can be vital to maintaining security for everyone involved in the court process. The program features insights statewide from court personnel, judges, supervisors and command staff, and members of the media on topics including: the legal authority and responsibility of court security personnel; the value of policies, procedures, and planning; elements of safety and protection; the public's perception of the courts; and, the importance of communication.

Vehicle Stops: Anonymous Tips + Corroboration

with Daniel McNeerney, Superior Court Judge, State of California

Minimal corroboration of an anonymous tip of unsafe or erratic driving may justify a stop of the reported vehicle. Cases cited: Lowry v. Gutierrez (2005) 129 CA4 926; People v. Carter (2005) 36 C4 1114. (8:29)

Apparent Consent by Third Party Searches

with Jeff Rubin, Alameda County District Attorney's Office

If police obtain consent to search a container from someone other than the owner of the container, the consent will still be held valid if the officer had an actual and objectively reasonable belief the person giving consent had apparent authority (i.e., mutual use and joint access or control over the container) to give consent. Cases cited: United States v. Ruiz (9th Cir. 2005) 428 F.3d 877; United States v. Welch (9th Cir. 1993) 4 F.3d 761. (10:17)

Public Meetings for Police Task Forces?

with William Bedsworth, Justice of the Court of Appeal, State of California

Discusses a Los Angeles Court of Appeal case where the court held that a police crime-fighting task force that had been operating behind closed doors for 15 years was a public agency and had to conduct its meetings in public under the Brown Act. While this caused a great deal of consternation in many quarters, Justice Bedsworth explains that it's not as catastrophic as it sounds and not all police task force meetings need be public. Case Cited: McKee v. Los Angeles-Interagency Metropolitan Police Apprehension Crime-Task Force (05 Daily Journal DAR 13589) (November 28, 2005). (7:47)

Requirements for Infraction Arrests

with Jeff Rubin, Alameda County District Attorney's Office

Generally an officer may not take someone who commits an infraction into custody if the person provides satisfactory ID and signs a written promise to appear. However, if a suspect does not present satisfactory ID, an officer may still, in his or her discretion, take the arrestee into custody even if the suspect is willing to submit a thumbprint and sign the promise to appear. AG opinion/statutes cited: AG Opinion 05-206; Pen. Code §§ 853.6 & 640; Veh. Code § 40303. (6:00)

Miranda: Special Advisement for Foreigners?

with Daniel McNeerney, Superior Court Judge, State of California

A suspect in a criminal case who hails from a foreign country and is unfamiliar with the American criminal justice system is not entitled to special advisements or additional explanations of the meaning of the Miranda rights. Case cited: U.S. v. Labrada (2005) DAR 13239. (6:02)

When Right to Counsel Attaches

with Jeff Rubin, Alameda County District Attorney's Office

A suspect's right to counsel attaches in California when a prosecutor files a complaint. Thus, even if the suspect has not been arrested or arraigned, once a complaint has been filed, law enforcement must elicit a waiver of the right to counsel before interviewing the suspect about the crime charged in the complaint. Cases/Statute cited: People v. Viray (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 1186; Texas v. Cobb (2001) 532 U.S. 162; Patterson v. Illinois (1988) 487 U.S. 285; Massiah v. United States (1964) 377 U.S. 201; Pen. Code § 817. (7:40)
